

“Patriot” ready for war, despite pleas of peace-activist “cowards”

To Jessica Lee (Re: “According to Bush,I am a Saddam lover”): What I want to say is, if you can’t take the heat, then get out of the kitchen. Peace demonstrators like yourself are nothing but a nuisance. In a glass jar is exactly where you belong.

I and many other Bush supporters would agree that the last thing we want to hear is, “Don’t attack this or that,” or, “Peace for all, blah blah blah blah!” Most of the time, the only way to get peace in this world is to make war. If you want to rebuke me and say that this war is unjust and just an excuse to up our gas privileges, then you’re full of it. What if I say that the involvement that Clinton put into Kosovo and the several other irrelevant outside influences on the world was just a “wag the dog” move to distract the Unites States from his sex scandal with Monica Lewinsky?

Your peace “activism” is nothing but a thorn in our side when we try to pass our mile tests. It is saying, “Oh this hurts and it is bad for me -- I should stop and just run when it’s too late, and I’m running for my life!” All war has its ups and downs, and you’re not going to solve anything by staying on the sidelines while our enemy plans to threaten our country – which it has been doing for the past decade! Do you honestly believe that if we try and even succeed with making a peace contract with Iraq, that they still won’t bother us? Yeah, that would probably just be a repeat of World War II.

And you say ministers are on your side? Listen sweetie, the only professors and people who are peace activists are the liberal bureaucrats who believe we should spend more time on saving the environment than trying to keep the citizens of this country secure.

Then you’ll probably say that a war will threaten our lives. Every job has its perks and downs. I have just as much risk of dying sitting here at this computer as you do at yours. So what? That’s why I’m a patriot. If you call yourself a patriot, you wouldn’t be as afraid to die for your country. Peace activists are cowards. That’s the bottom line. I don’t want to have to listen to cowards.
